A facelift, also known as a rhytidectomy, is performed to reduce the appearance of facial wrinkles and other signs of aging on the face and jaw. This task is accomplished by lifting and tightening the underlying muscles in the face. The result is a more youthful and contoured look. In addition to the work performed on the facial muscles, the surgeon also removes excess skin and fat that adds to an aged appearance.

The surgeon has the option of multiple facelift techniques. They include:

- Full/Traditional Facelift – The surgeon addresses cheeks that sag as well as excess fat and skin and deep creases below the eyes. The facelift incision runs along the temple and then goes around the ear and down towards the neck.
- Mid Facelift – The tissues below the eyes, and around the cheeks, are lifted and tightened. The incisions are also deeper than a traditional facelift in order to reach muscles that are not normally operated on during a traditional facelift.
- Mini Facelift – This technique, normally performed using an endoscopic technique, treats the neck, jaw and lower cheeks. The incisions made during the surgery go along the hairline and behind the ear to allow the doctor to lift the muscles and remove fat and skin.
- Lower Facelift – This technique focuses on the bottom third of the face in order to get rid of jowls. It also lifts the sagging corners of the mouth and enhances the look of the jaw. Any incisions run along the ears and the hairline.
- Thread Facelift – The surgeon makes tiny stitches, located below the skin, to lift the underlying muscles without producing visible scars.

Patients travel to Los Angeles, as well as the surrounding cities of Santa Monica, Beverly Hills and Hollywood, to experience superior facial rejuvenation thanks to its reputation as a leader in facelift procedures in the United States.
